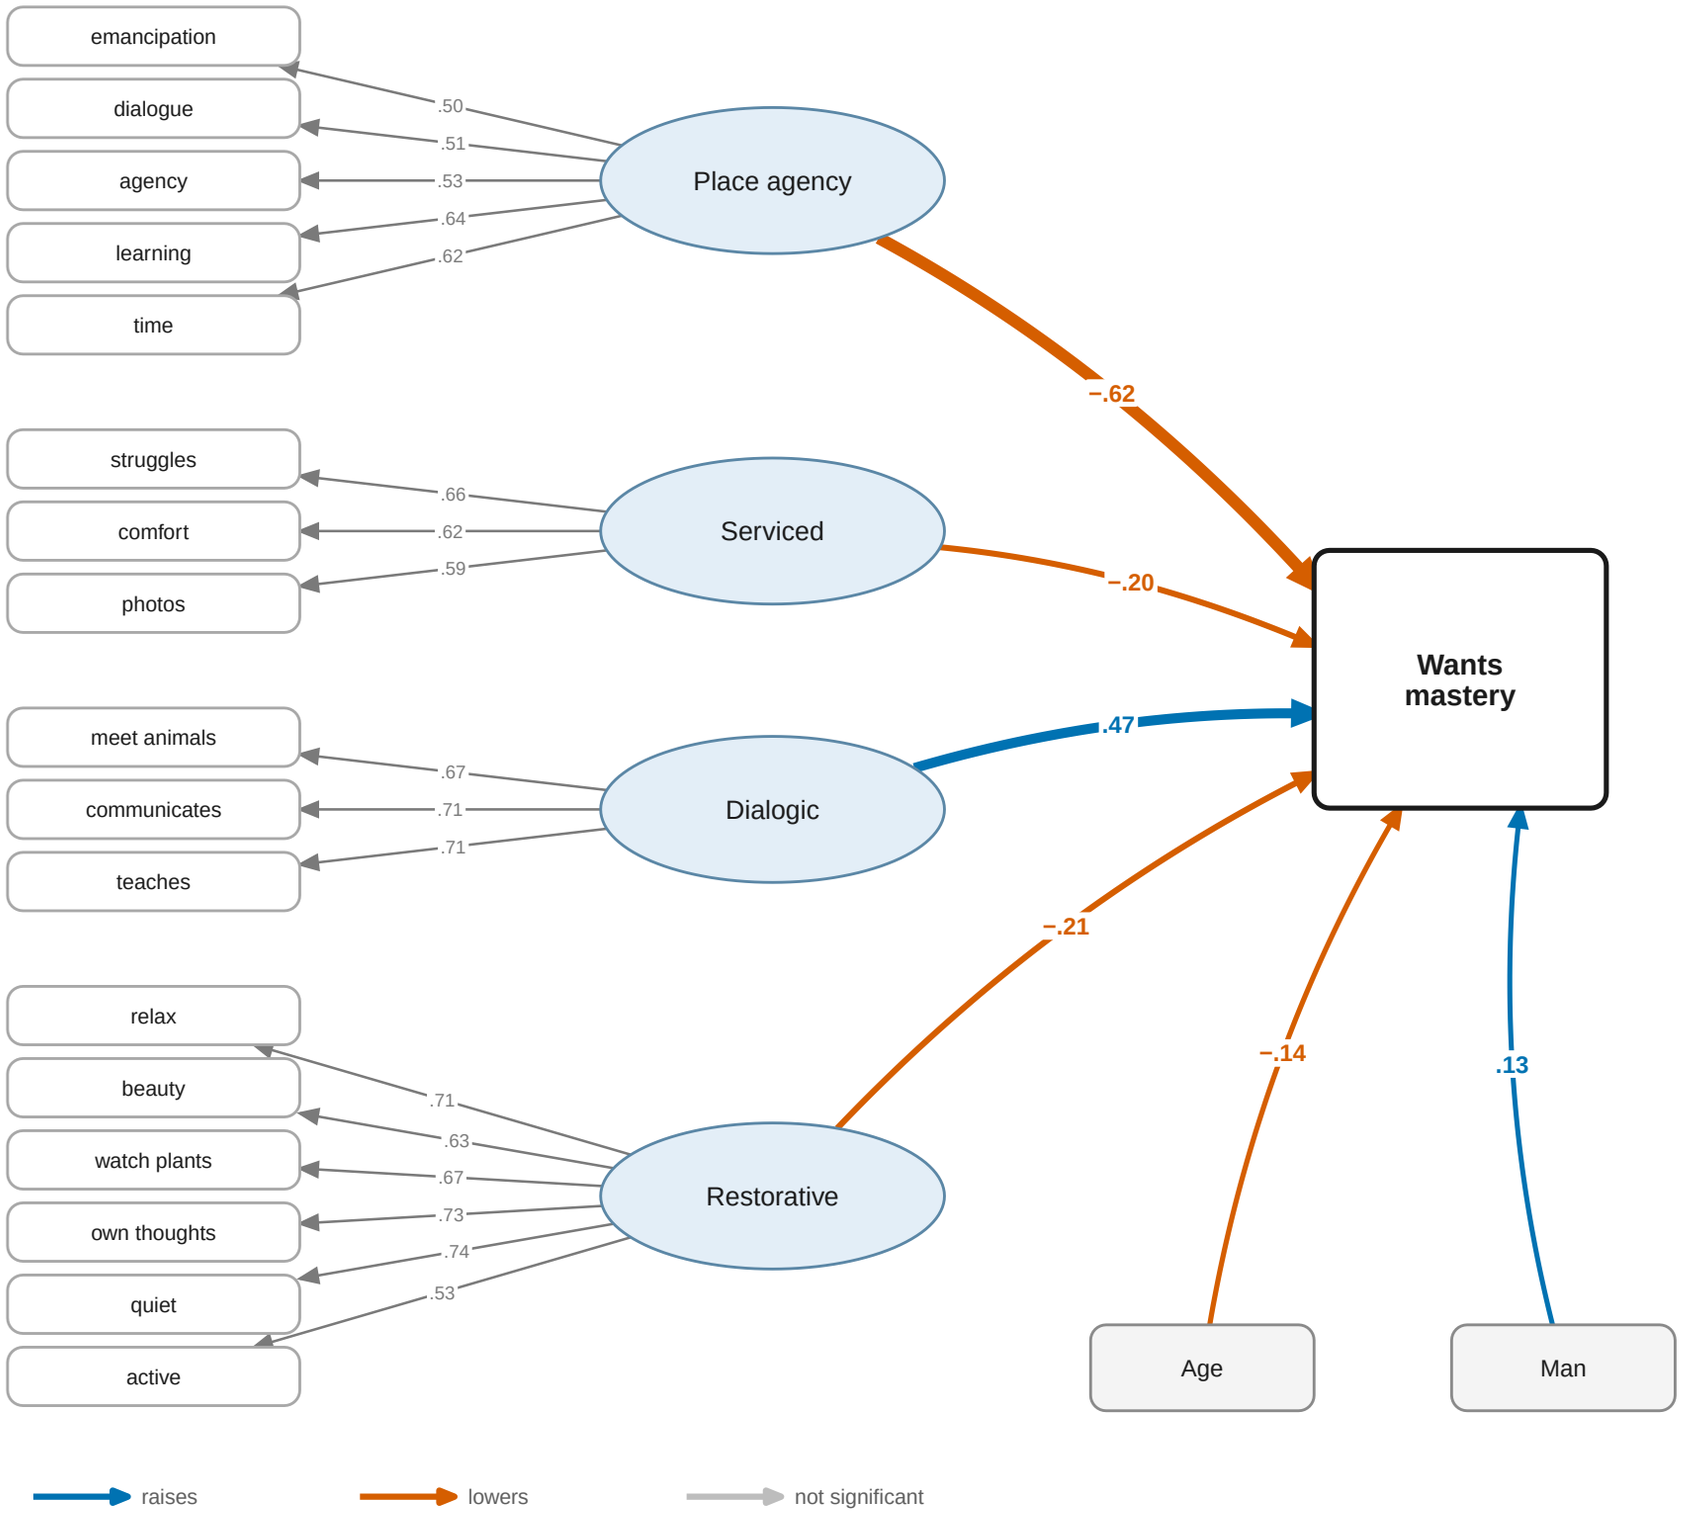
The role people want, from motives and from how much agency they grant a place

Standardised estimates. Line width grows with the size of the path; grey lines are loadings.
Higher place agency = the place is granted more independence and influence.



WLSMV, n = 2,489, ordinal indicators. Education and country dummies are in the model but not drawn (no country differs significantly from Canada).
The place−agency latent correlates .36 with restorative, .36 with dialogic and −.28 with serviced. Place agency is the personal counterpart of the role item, so its path is partly the same construct measured twice; the motive paths shift once it is included. Source: 18_place_relationship.R
